Overview

The Kuari Pass trek is widely regarded as one of the most exceptional winter trekking experiences in India. It is located in the Himalayan area of Garhwal, which is known for its stunning scenery. This path, which is located at a height of 13,900 feet, is sometimes known as the Lord Curzon trail. It was named after the previous Viceroy of India, who completed the walk in 1905, adding historical value to the attractiveness of the trail. The Kuari Pass walk begins at Joshimath and covers a route that is 28 km long. Along the way, there are mild slopes, gorgeous evergreen woods, and panoramic vistas of snow-capped peaks. In the course of this trip, hikers will go through secluded villages such as Tugasi, Guling, and Khullara, where they will have the opportunity to immerse themselves in the diverse local cultures and traditions of Uttarakhand. The path provides travellers with breathtaking vistas of the Pangarchulla, Chaukhamba, Neelkanth, Dronagiri, Hathi Ghoda, and Nilgiri mountain ranges, which captivates the hearts of those who are passionate about travelling. The appeal of the walk is further enhanced by snow-covered oak woods and virgin meadows, which leave an unforgettable effect on those who are passionate about snow while also being environment lovers.

Day 1:

From Rishikesh to Joshimath

Today we will start our journey in the early morning for Joshimath. The town, which is located in the Chamoli District in the state of Uttarakhand in India, will serve as the starting point for the journey to the magnificent Kuari pass. There are a few Himalayan trekking places that may be reached via this location, which is situated at an elevation of 6,150 feet. As you make your way to Joshimath, you will go through the Panchprayag, also known as the five auspicious junctures of the Ganga. These junctures are Devaprayag, Rudraprayag, Karnaprayag, Nandaprayag, and Vishnuprayag. Keep your cameras close at hand so that you can capture the breathtaking scenery of the mountains.
